

of the inspectors and captains involved and will mean the shifting of hundreds of policemen.

No captain was promoted to take the place of Inspector McLaughlin at the head of the Detective Bureau. For the present the old Central Office will remain headless. Under the direction of Commissioner Bingham it will be put up into squads.

Either Sergeant James McCafferty, of the Detective Bureau, or Sergeant John McCauley, who is in command of the Detective Bureau in Brooklyn, will succeed Inspector McLaughlin. Commissioner Bingham has not made up his mind which to appoint.

Commissioner Bingham's order shows that the tremendous political and business pull that were brought to bear in behalf of McCluskey, O'Brien, Cross, McLaughlin and Grant were of no avail. Even the Mayor's intervention failed to save McCluskey. It is not denied in Police Headquarters that Commissioner Bingham is going after McCluskey's police scalp.

TOUGH SLEDDING FOR THESE.

As commander of the Tenderloin precinct he will be in a delicate position. He has many good friends along Broadway and the side streets. The Inspector over him, Joseph Burns, will take no chances of having a Captain get him into trouble, and there will be something doing, no matter which way McCluskey handles himself. "It is a tough precinct in which to try a man out if they want to get you," said a wise cop to-day.

Inspector McLaughlin gets an awful slide, from the command of the Detective Bureau to the peaceful shades of Westchester, where an automobile passing along the country road makes a noise like a tornado.

Inspector Cross also got a big come-down from the Borough Inspector of Brooklyn to the command of an inconspicuous precinct in the borough. The fall of Stephen O'Brien is far and violent. He will take charge of the West Thirty-seventh street precinct, which is a ticklish one to handle under present conditions.

Inspectors Walsh, Baldwin and Hussey, who went to Albany to fight the Bingham bill, get off easily. Walsh and Baldwin remain in their old districts. Hussey is transferred to Brooklyn, but the district he is sent to command is a lively one and will keep him busy.

The Commissioner sent out notice of the changes in General Order No. 21, copies of which were presented to the reporters by Deputy Commissioner Bugher.

Commissioner Bingham refused to discuss the order in any way. He sent word that he was busy on another order along the same lines to be given out late to-night or to-morrow morning. Which would indicate that the end is not yet.

PARSON AKED SEES DIRK CARRIER ROCKEFELLER AND WIDS REPORTERS IN SING SING

His Wife Too English to Talk for Him, She Says.

When the Rev. Charles Frederic Aked, D. D., formerly rector of Pembroke Chapel in Liverpool, England, and now pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, arrived here on Wednesday he made the startling admission that he did not know John D. Rockefeller and was not ready to express any opinion of him.

Dr. Aked knows Mr. Rockefeller now, but appears to be no less reluctant to talk about the Standard Oil magnate than before. His meeting took place yesterday at the Hotel Majestic, where the clergyman is staying. He left the hotel early to-day, and his wife tentatively suggested that he had absented himself for no other reason than that he did not want to talk about Mr. Rockefeller for the press.

Mr. Rockefeller turned up at the hotel without any preliminary announcement that he intended to pay a call on his new pastor. He drove alone from his house at No. 4 West Fifty-fourth street in a closed cab. He walked up to the desk in the hotel and said to a clerk:

"I would like to see him."

"If you will give me your card I will send it up and see if Dr. Aked can receive you," responded the clerk, who did not recognize the caller.

Just as Mr. Rockefeller, who said that it is Mr. Rockefeller, said the waiter.

At that moment Mr. Rockefeller doffed his hat and the clerk instantly knew that the caller was practicing no deception as to his identity. The wig was what made his mind clear on this point.

Five minutes later Dr. Aked appeared in the hotel lobby and Mr. Rockefeller introduced himself to the clergyman. They went into the Palm Room and had a long chat. They were barely seated when John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and his wife were announced. They were shown into the Palm Room and the elder Rockefeller introduced them.

The four remained there for nearly an hour and then the callers left the hotel.

A Word from Mrs. Aked.

A newspaper man attempted to see Mrs. Rockefeller yesterday, but was told that he was not at home. Mrs. Aked said over the telephone that her husband would be out all day.

"The newspaper men have given him a fright," she said. "He is afraid they will pick out all of his faults and dissect them for the benefit of the public. No, he does not care to talk about his meeting with Mr. Rockefeller."

"Oh, dear me, no," Mrs. Englishwomen are different from the Americans," said the voice of Mrs. Aked over the wire, in response to a request that she should speak in behalf of her distinguished husband.

"In my country the wife is not at liberty to talk for her husband. Why, it might get me into great trouble to violate this fixed rule."

HARTRIDGE DIDN'T WAIT TO SEE WIFE OF THAW TOMBS

Lawyer Went to Prison, but Left When He Learned That Evelyn Was Calling on Her Husband in the Building.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw paid her husband a visit in the Tombs to-day and remained as long as the regulations would permit. While she was with her husband in the consultation room.

Lawyer Clifford Hartridge arrived. He was about to send up his card to Harry Thaw, when he learned that Evelyn Nesbit Thaw was visiting her husband. After hesitating a bit, Hartridge put his card back in his pocket and left the Tombs. Later, after Mrs. Thaw had departed, Mr. Peabody, of the Hartridge firm, called on the prisoner.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 19.—Mrs. William Thaw, mother of Harry Thaw, the slayer of Stanford White, and her daughter, the Countess of Yarmouth, are at Lyndhurst, the Thaw home, to-day, and it is said that the mother has given up hope of having her son released on bail.

This statement was made after Mrs. Thaw had consulted with Attorney D. T. Watson, and another attorney, who is said to have been Senator Philander C. Knox. It is believed that it was upon their advice that Mrs. Thaw has become resigned to her son spending the summer months in the Tombs prison in New York.

GIMBEL, RICH MERCHANT, HAS DISAPPEARED

which he is prominently connected with for him to the limit.

Ivor Clark is said to have given Detective Brennan and Reardon information concerning his acquaintance with Gimbel, which will come out at the hearing. The Clark live at No. 240 West Fifty-seventh street, and for three or four months, it is stated, Gimbel has known the lad, who is a slender, tall youth with a lame leg. The merchant came to this city some days ago and stopped at the Hoffman House. He sent a note to Clark, asking him to come down and have dinner yesterday at Martin's. It is charged, and the note was intercepted by Mrs. Clark. She knew nothing of the strange man her son had been meeting, and feared that something must be wrong. The boy had had much money of late, and told his parents it had been given to him by an acquaintance. Ivor attends Trinity-Chapel School, in West Twenty-fifth street.

Mrs. Clark went to see Assistant District Attorney Krotel, and told him her suspicions, and that her son was a stranger and caught the wealthy merchant.

The note was given to Ivor, and he was told by his mother and the detectives, who took him into their confidence, to go along with the man. Gimbel and Ivor entered a cab at the Hoffman House and were driven up Fifth avenue, while Detectives Reardon and Brennan followed in an automobile. At Fifty-third street the detectives stopped the cab and made the arrest.

Detectives Charge Bribery.

Gimbel is said to have pulled $100 from his pocket and offered it to the detectives as a bribe, but they called for more. He then, they claim, went with them to Wolff Brothers, at No. 100 Broadway, where he drew $2,000, which they accepted.

Mr. Gimbel was taken to the Criminal Courts Building. He engaged Lawyer Dan P. Sullivan to defend him and tearfully begged all hands to keep the affair quiet.

Gimbel is married and lives with his wife and family at No. 314 Third Avenue. He is said to be a man of good habits and good morals.

PHILADELPHIA, April 19.—Much uneasiness is expressed here by relatives and friends of Benjamin Gimbel, who is said to have been arrested in New York last night ostensibly for Philadelphia. He was expected early this morning to defend him and tearfully begged all hands to keep the affair quiet.

"SHE'S OUR WIFE," SAID HUBBY NO. 1 TO BATTERED NO. 2

Handsomeness Athletic Brunette Mission Worker Handy With Fists.

A tall, handsome brunette in a smart spring costume was the centre of attraction to-day in the Second Criminal Court of Jersey City. Two men who said they were her husbands were there to enhance things for the brightly defendant. One of them displayed two eyes in deep mourning and a nose that was out of plumb. He said the muscular brunette had thus impaired his features with her ready fists.

The woman was Miss Mary E. Osborne before she engaged in the marriage industry. She was arrested at a Gospel Mission at Communipaw and Bergen avenues, Jersey City, on a warrant sworn out by William Broadmeadow, a trolley conductor of No. 36 Seaview avenue, who figures as husband No. 2. She was one of the most fervent members of the mission, and was just delivering her regular evening address to a crowded hall when a policeman served the warrant on her.

Her husband No. 1 was Edward P. Landrigan, who informed the police that he had married the woman on June 4, 1904, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Thomas R. Bridges in the City Hall at Newark. He said that he took his bride to his fine country home at St. Hill, N. J., six days later.

His bride announced that she was tired of living with him, and when he murmured at her assertion that he was no good and she meant to leave him, the bride promptly knocked him down with her fist.

By the time Landrigan came out of the trance that followed his athletic bride had flown, and he heard no more of her until a few days ago, when a meadow called on him. They compared notes, and arrived at the conclusion that Mrs. Broadmeadow was the former Mrs. Landrigan.

"Where did you get those black eyes and that nose?" asked Landrigan.

"She gave 'em to me," replied Broadmeadow, feeling the latter member tenderly.

"That settles it," said Landrigan. "She's our wife. There isn't another woman in the world who could hit it so well. I know."

Broadmeadow said he and the woman had been married in Brooklyn on Feb. 28 and that she had lived with him just ten days when she quit his home in Jersey City. When she returned a few days ago to get some of her clothing she left the black eyes and warped nose as a memento of the occasion.

The prisoner was held in $500 bail for trial on the charge of assaulting Broadmeadow. The two husbands hurried on to Brooklyn to lay the charge of bigamy before the District Attorney.

REVENUE COLLECTOR AT ROCHESTER MUST GO.

If Sanders Does Not Resign He Will Be Removed—His Successor Selected.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—It was admitted at the White House to-day that the resignation of Archibald Sanders as Collector of Internal Revenue for Rochester, N. Y., had been requested about a week ago.

It was not known at the White House whether or not he had sent in his resignation, but it was stated that if he does not so, he will be removed.

His successor already has been chosen but his name was not announced.

It was stated at the White House to-day that the replacing of Mr. Sanders is part of the plan of the President to back up Gov. Hughes' "strengthen his hand."

The same policy, it was further stated, was followed in the case of the Postmaster in former Representative Alexander's district, whom the President declined to appoint, but decided instead to give the place to persons recommended by Mr. Wadsworth's successor, Mr. Fox, who is now the administrator of the district.

The President is also said to be continuing to make appointments in New York State of persons who will support the administration of Gov. Hughes.
